SECTION IV. OPEN-ENDED QUESTIONS

1. A primary focus of the U.S. Congress this past year has been to reform health care and health insurance in the United States. Please briefly explain your recommendations for reform and the roles of the government and private sector in your proposal.

If our President and Congress really wanted to reduce the cost of health care in the U.S., they would start by repealing the laws they passed that are driving the cost up. Medicare and Medicaid are free health care entitlements that only serve to increase demand. The price control measures of the same entitlements force the doctors and hospitals to pass the extra cost to the paying patients and insurance companies. They also serve as the leverage needed to force hospitals to treat any one regardless of ability to pay (COBRA), which also pass on cost.

My interpretation of the Commerce clause of the constitution means it is the duty of congress to "make regular" interstate commerce. With that in mind, how did the insurance companies manage to get their own little state by state monopolies to start with? I consider this to be a prime example of how our government has simply ignored its real constitutional duties opting instead to spend its time grabbing more power and our freedoms.

- 1) Repeal the Social Security Act, Cobra, and any other entitlement programs that are intruding into the health care industry, creating inflated demand.
- 2) End the state by state insurance monopolies.
- 3) Repeal the laws that prevent health care providers from offering their services without the consent of government licensing boards as this only reduces supply.
- 4) Make FDA drug approval voluntary, allow private companies to test new drugs.
- 5) Repeal the 16th Amendment and abolish the IRS. Let the people keep their own money and purchase the health care they choose, according to their priorities.

When the people start taking responsibility for their own health care just as they would for groceries or car maintenance, the market will do what it always does, reduce cost and improve quality. Instead of the health care industry being thought of as a problem, the US could easily become a global health care provider just like any other product or service.
